FLETCHER SPEAKER ROOSEVELT ATTENDS Parade and Mardi Gras Rites in Paris Marked by

Clashes of Factions as Parade Ends. By The Associated Frees.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—A lone unnamed soldier lying in his stony crypt on a peaceful autumn-brightened Virginia hillside received today the honor and homage paid to those who died in the nation's fiercest foreign war.
Onietiv lay his bedut in a carlot.

Quietly lay his body in a casket whose top was crowded with honor medals of the nations of the world while President Roosevelt, not far off, joined in a prayer and later

Seventren years ago today Bugler Sellier sounded the "cease firing" signal that put an end to the most destructive war in history.
Today Marion joined with this and other nations of the world in the observance of Armistice day, opening the prefentious program with a ceremony on the court house esplanade at 11 a. m., which will be closed with a gala parade and Mardi Gras early tonight. The principal speaker at the 11 o'clock program was Congressman Brooks Fletcher, who assalled munitions makers and international financiers as propagandists who hurled America into the World wer.
The ringing of church bells, blowing of whislies and strens three minutes before 11 a. m. marked the opening of the day's program. cff, joined in a prayer amount of spoke.
Yet not in deepest sorrow did countless thousands assemble amid Arlington's rows of crosses over the soldier and sailor dend. There was more of humble fellowship, and pride that the unranted dead rests as a constant symbol of a willingness of Americans everywhere to die libat liberty and justice and right may five.
